CAUGHT TRYING TO MAKE ESCAPE

Joseph Brown Got into Jail Cellar when he was Discovered by Other Prisoners. Would have had Little Trouble Getting away.

Joseph Brown, alleged chicken thief and charged with resisting arrest, attempted to escape from the County jail Friday afternoon while Sheriff Fissel was absent. He was frustrated in his attempt by the arrival of several other prisoners at the scene of his operations.

Brown wandered away from the balance of the prisoners who were playing games in the corridor and went into the wash room where he worked quietly and succeeded in getting up two of the boards from the floor. Through the hole made in this way he dropped into the cellar under the jail. His plan was evidently to get from there into the cellar under the house, then make his way out. The cellar wall at some places between the jail and the house is none too strong and he would have had little difficulty.

The carrying out of these plans was given up, however, when several of the other prisoners detected him in his work. He made no attempt to go on, evidently fearing that an alarm would be given.

It will be remembered that Brown was arrested several weeks ago one evening while walking on York street with Mrs. Claybaugh who was later arrested charged with keeping a disorderly house and is now in jail awaiting trial. Brown is accused of shooting chickens belonging to another party.

ROOSEVELT FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Ex-President Roosevelt has been Invited to Make Memorial Day Address here. Large Excursion of Trainmen already Arranged.

An invitation has been extended to ex-President Theodore Roosevelt to deliver the Memorial Day address at Gettysburg in 1912. The invitation was sent at the instance of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of North America who will hold their tenth bi-ennial convention in Harrisburg the week of Memorial Day.

The Philadelphia and Reading is going to give the delegates, who are expected to number about 1500, a free excursion to Gettysburg on May 30 and those in charge of the convention arrangements forwarded to Colonel Roosevelt an invitation to have him make an address here. This address, if delivered, will be the address of the day. It is understood that the local Grand Army Post has no objections to Mr. Roosevelt's being the orator of the day provided he does not touch on politics or labor questions. The veterans feel that Memorial Day is a time for memories and not for the discussion of present day topics.

The two trains bringing the railroad men will stop at the Mummaburg road crossing north of town and an address will be delivered by a guide from the crest of Oak Ridge. From there they will walk to the Reynolds' station where another lecture will be given. Trains will then be run out on the Western Maryland tracks and the delegates taken out to High Water Mark. In this way they will not have to rely on the usual means which are always taxed on Memorial Day.

The railroaders will also be given complimentary excursions by the Pennsylvania Railroad during the convention ten day period. One will be to Washington and the other to Atlantic City. It is probable that Colonel Roosevelt will address their convention at Harrisburg the day after the Gettysburg visit.

Helen Berens, the 18-year old Washington girl, formerly of the McSherrystown convent, arrested in Boston a week ago in company with a woman who gave her name as Gertrude Toy, is detained at the Boston Jail as a United States witness in a pending trial for violation of the white slave statute, under which charge the Toy woman is held in $3,000 bail.

The girl is said to have been lured away from a convent by the Toy woman and later taken to Philadelphia. The accused, who also gave her name as Mrs. Grace Dodd Browner, says she met the Berens girl and a few months later the authorities of the convent St. Joseph's at McSherrystown, notified Helen's parents that she was missing with Mrs. Toy. Ernest Dodd, father of Mrs. Toy, is a former dairyman of Washington.

After a search of months by the police of various cities, Helen Berens was arrested in Boston several nights ago by Federal officers, along with Mrs. Toy.

ROBBERS SPEND NIGHT TRAVELING

Took Hand Car and Ran up and down Western Maryland Tracks between Highfield and Fairfield. Frightened away at Latter Place.

Traveling back and forth between Highfield and Fairfield on a stolen hand car two thieves spent a busy night of it which would likely have been very profitable had they not been discovered at Fairfield station and put to rout.

The men, who are unknown, took the hand car of the Highfield Section gang and going down the railroad track stopped first at Charming where they gained entrance to Clarence Martin's store and took some flour. They then resumed their journey down the mountain on the car and reached Fairfield Station about half past four.

Their coming awakened Mr. Cease, the section boss at that place, and he at once began an investigation, thinking it strange that the hand car should be taken out at such an hour. By the time Mr. Cease got out of his house he found the car on the track opposite the warehouse but no one was to be seen or heard. He at once got the car to the tool house near by. It contained in addition to the flour, two bicycles and several bags of what is supposed to have been feed.

By the time Mr. Cease had the car off the track the men had again appeared and at once started throwing stones at him, using oaths as they continued their attack. Mr. Cease shouted for help and John Bierly, who lives nearby, came upon the scene with a loaded rifle only to find the robbers going down the track on the car.

They went to a place about a mile below Virginia Mills where they left the car on the track and then started away with the bicycles and some other things that could be carried easily. It is believed their visit to Fairfield Station was for the purpose of robbing the warehouse and that the timely arrival of Mr. Cease and Mr. Bierly was all that prevented them from accomplishing their plan.

The men pointed guns in their faces and demanded money. The robbers secured five ten dollar bills and a gold watch and made their escape.

DON'TS.
Don't expect poultry badly bled to keep well, look well and sell well.
Don't forget that fine poultry badly packed deteriorates during shipment.
Don't fail to study market conditions. You may slip when the market is glutted and get little for your stuff.
Don't forget that late chicks do not catch the early worm and meat food must be substituted for the insects killed by the heat.
Don't fail to clean the incubators before storing and close all the slides so mice cannot enter and work on the mineral wool lining.
Don't expect many eggs in late summer. The good Biddy quits the nest and seeks a cool spot for a rest and finally drops every feather to don new clothes for wintry weather.
Don't sell your reputation for a few dollars. Every time a rogue his cusomer beats the news goes farther than he cheats, and in the end his business goes to wreck, while he gets whacked right in the neck.

A word of caution to buyers of Canada land: Notwithstanding the fact that soil and rainfall may be all that can be desired and it's well to be pretty sure on this latter point) steer shy of any section where the grain is likely to be frozen stiff in the field just before time to cut. A friend who moved to a district not many years ago later left for a warmer climate because he lost his grain crop three years out of five in the above manner. Farming under such conditions is altogether too tough on a fellow's nervous system, let alone the strain on his bank account.

The secret service bureau is said to have information that the painting was smuggled across the boundary from Canada at a point west of the Great Lakes.

ARMED ROBBER ROUTED AT BANK

Laurel, Md., Cashier Fires on Bandit Demanding Cash.

Laurel, Md., Sept. 9.—A masked man entered the Citizens' National bank here and at the point of a pistol demanded that the receiving teller hand over the money lying at the desk beside him.

The would-be robber was forced to flight before he could secure the money by Cashier Waters, who fired two shots at the fleeing man.

A posse was at once organized and started in pursuit.

When the stranger appeared in the bank only A. R. Devans, the receiving teller, and a customer were in the outer office. Presenting his pistol, he commanded both to throw up their hands, following with a demand on the teller that he put the money on the desk into a small sack, which he had thrust through the window.

At this point Cashier Waters, whose attention had been attracted by the sound of loud voices, appeared in the doorway of his office, revolver in hand. He, too, was ordered to throw up his hands and his response was a couple of quickly fired shots.

The marauder did not reply in kind but dashed out into the street, dropping a mask and his cap as he ran. He was chased through the streets, but outdistanced his pursuers and gained the shelter of the woods.

FRANCE TO KNOW SOON

Germany is Expected to Reply at Once to Moroccan Proposals.

Berlin, Sept. 9.—Following a conference with the Kaiser at Kiel, the imperial chancellor has had a meeting with Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, who is expected to hand Germany's reply to the Moroccan proposals made by France to Ambassador Cambon at once.

The reply, it is hinted, will certainly not be a rejection of the French proposals, but will be in the nature of counter proposals providing a basis for a compromise on details connected with safeguards for Germany's interests and economic opportunities in Morocco.

LONELY CELL FOR POMEROY

Man Who Was Called "Boy Murderer" Begins 35th Year in Jail.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 9.—Jesse Pomeroy, whom criminologists and penologists regard as one of the most desperate criminals of the age, began the thirty-fifth year of his life sentence in solitary confinement in the Massachusetts state prison, at Charlestown, on Friday.

No other prisoner ever served so long in solitary confinement in the United States. Pomeroy was sentenced when he was sixteen years old to pass his life alone in a cell. He had killed two children after torturing them; he had subjected other children to sufferings which only a fiendish mind could devise.

Very recently it was represented to Governor Foss, by pitying women chiefly, that Pomeroy's character had changed, that he had become tractable, perhaps repentant. The governor was told that Pomeroy had educated himself in prison, that he reads books from the prison library nearly all day long, studies law assiduously and writes excellent English.

Governor Foss, of course, would not pardon the convict whom even his keepers feared. But the governor was inclined to end the "boy murderer's" solitary confinement—to permit him to mingle with his fellows within four walls, to have religious consolation in the prison chapel, and to breathe fresh air in the yard.

At the very moment that Governor Foss was in this merciful frame of mind Pomeroy was planning to escape, as he had done before often. His keepers discovered in his sleeve an ingeniously made tool in the form of a bit and bit-screw. It is believed that he intended to bore holes around the lock of his cell and thus gain the corridor.

FIVE BREAK JAIL; FOUR RECAPTURED

Sheriff of Elkton, Md., Pursues
Escaped Convicts by Train.

Elkton, Md., Sept. 9.—After being at liberty just forty minutes, Frank Goltz, Frank Kennedy, John Stanton and Ernest Brenkle, all of Philadelphia, who broke jail here, were recaptured by Sheriff McAllister at Bell Hill, who marched his prisoners back to jail at the point of a revolver.

The prisoners were permitted to use the jail yard by Deputy Stewart. As soon as he returned to the jail office the above named prisoners, together with Isaac Opley, colored, awaiting trial, carried their iron beds to the yard, and after making a ladder the five men had scaled the thirty-five foot stone wall and made a hurried run up the Pennsylvania railroad tracks.

The sheriff was notified, and in order to head them off, waved to a northbound passenger train to stop and take him up the tracks. The engineer put on steam, and when close up to the escaped prisoners, when the train slowed down and the officers stepped off. The prisoners scattered in all directions, but a half dozen shots halted the white men, but the colored man kept on a dead run and made good his escape.

$1000 REWARD FOR BANDITS

Murder of Mine Contractor and Driver Arouses Officials.

Tamaqua, Pa., Sept. 9.—In a determined effort to capture the desperado who murdered Joseph Zehner, a mine contractor, of Lansford, and Samuel Watkins, of Philadelphia, on a lonely road near Nesquehoning, a reward of $1000 has been offered for their apprehension, $500 by the Carbon county commissioners and $500 by the Lehigh Valley and Navigation company.

Two foreigners, captured at Parryville while acting in a suspicious manner at the railway station, and said to be bound for Elizabeth, N. J., were brought to Mauch Chunk. They gave their names as Paul Mustacchi and Philip Fareigi, but would say little.

Getting information from the foreign element is very difficult, but the police are of the opinion that Mustacchi is a resident of "Little Italy," the Italian colony a short distance from the scene of the crime. There were blood stains on his coat collar and the sleeve. The men were committed to the Mauch Chunk jail to await further developments.

Returns After He is Supposedly Buried

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 9.—Mrs. George Weber, of Point Richmond, Cal., called up the coroner. "We made a mistake in holding that funeral," she said. "My husband came home." Funeral services were held a month ago over a body found in the bay and identified by Mrs. Weber as that of her husband. When Weber returned he said he had wandered away in a dazed condition and did not know where he had been.

HOW TO MAKE COUNTRY EARTH ROADS BETTER.

Work First and Talk Afterward.
Make a Drag and Use It.

First—Go to work yourself—talk afterward. Get a log eight feet long and eight inches thick, split it in half, back it together by diagonal stakes thirty inches apart, with the split sides facing the front. Fasten a chain to each end of the front log, hook a team to the middle of the chain, get the drag out on the country road after a rain and start in to haul the drag over the road at an angle of forty-five degrees, moving the dirt from the side gutters to the center of the road.

UPPER—SAWING LOG TO MAKE ROAD DRAG. LOWER—USING ROAD DRAG.

If you do this work yourself you will learn more about how to make country earth roads better in two hours than anybody could tell you in print in fourteen weeks.

The second thing is: Study the needs of the little stretch of road upon which you actually do your work. Make that stretch of road a model of a good roadway in every particular. See to it that every individual who drives over your road becomes a talking advertisement for highway improvement. If you must blast out rock to afford good drainage for the side gutters along your road why blast them out. Don't wait to talk about it.

Earth and water spell mud, and a muddy road is not a good road, and you cannot get rid of water until the water has the right slope of a drainage channel to carry it off.

Third—if you will let no obstacle discourage you and if you will keep sublimely on, plugging ahead as the old tortoise did in its race with the hare, which slept by the wayside thinking because of its slowness it could overcome the slow going tortoise; if you make the improvement of country earth roads a study of pleasure and a sort of philanthropic religion, your achievements for highway betterment will be swift and sure throughout whichever country district you may work.

OILING ROADS KILLS FLIES.

Massachusetts Man Says Tarvia Destroys the Eggs and Larvae.

A Lenox (Mass.) entomologist asserts that the absence of flies along oiled highways is due to the destruction of the eggs and larvae by the application of tarvia and the byproducts of oils which are being used to prevent dust. After conducting a series of experiments the Lenox man has found that there is almost a total absence of the stable or biting fly.

The Lenox experimenter says that tarvia has practically killed the breeding places of the stable fly and that there are fewer houseflies.

Since it has been established that typhoid germs are carried by flies, also Asiatic cholera, and that there is strong evidence that the fly is also the carrier of tuberculosis and other diseases, the discovery that oiling highways lessens the common fly and almost entirely exterminates the stable fly appears to be of the highest importance.

PLAN LONG HIGHWAY.

Improved Road to Be Built From Mexico to Alaska.

That a well improved road from the Mexican boundary to the Alaskan north is now a certainty was the expression before the annual meeting of the Pacific Highway association in Portland, Ore. Delegates from California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia told of the work that is being accomplished and said that sentiment is now strong for the highway project.

The report of A. E. Todd of Victoria, B. C., was especially encouraging, he reporting that the road from Victoria to Hazelton, eighty miles from the Alaskan boundary, would be open next year.

New Road to Cost $199,750.

The county commissioners of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., have made application to the court for permission to build a macadam road between Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton by way of White Haven. The road will be twenty and one-half miles long, and the estimated cost is $199,750.

BEATTIE GUILTY OF WIFE MURDER

Jury After 58 Minutes Convicts
Him in First Degree.

OVERCOME BY VERDICT

"I Have Not Lost Yet," He Tells
Friends When Execution Is Set For Nov. 24.

Chesterfield Court House, Va., Sept. 9.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., was found guilty of murder in the first degree. The jury had been out only fifty-eight minutes when it came into court with a verdict of guilty. No degree of guilt was specified, however, and Judge Watson directed that the jury retire again to consider the matter.

It seemed only a minute or two that the jury was gone. When they reentered the foreman announced that the jury held Beattie to be guilty of first degree murder in putting his wife to death on the night of July 18 last. The penalty is electrocution.

The prisoner stood rigidly in the bar as he heard the verdict, his face flushed and his cheeks twitching nervously. When he heard the conviction he sank into his chair and buried his head in his hands. For several minutes he did not speak, and his father beside him also covered his face with his hands.

The foreman's announcement rang out in the quiet court room, the other eleven jurors simultaneously fairly shouting "Guilty!"

New Trial Denied.

Counsel for the defense moved to set aside the verdict on the ground of being contrary to law and evidence and of misdirection by the court and because of various rulings on the evidence excepted to by the defense.

The court overruled the motion for a new trial. Judge Watson stated that the trial consisted almost entirely of questions of fact, and that no questions of law entered materially into the decision of the jury.

The defense asked for ninety days to file a petition for a writ of error to the supreme court of appeals of Virginia. Attorney Wendenburg, for the state, asked that the defense be restricted to within a few days of the meeting of the supreme court in November.

Judge Watson decided that, in view of the fact that there had been little delay in the actual trial of the case the request of counsel for the accused was reasonable and granted a stay of execution for ninety days.

Must Die on Nov. 24.

Judge Watson sentenced Beattie to be electrocuted at Richmond on Nov. 24. Asked if he had anything to say why he should not be sentenced, the prisoner replied:

"I have nothing to say."
To friends Beattie said:
"I have not lost yet."

The judge stated as a preliminary to passing sentence that he desired to add nothing to the anxiety of the convicted man. He passed sentence as follows:

"The jury has found you guilty in the first degree, and therefore your life is forfeited and the judgment of this court is that on Nov. 24 you be delivered into the custody of the superintendent of the penitentiary and that between the hours of sunrise and sunset your life shall be extinguished; and may God have mercy on your soul."

Beattie's father buried his face in his hands and appeared overcome. The prisoner smilingly shook hands with several acquaintances.

In sending the jury back to fix the degree of guilt, Judge Watson announced that under the Virginia law every murder was presumed to be murder in the second degree unless otherwise specified, and it was incumbent upon the defense to reduce it to manslaughter.

TARRED SCHOOL TEACHER

Eight Men Arrested For Attack on Young Lady.

Shady Bend, Kan., Sept. 9.—Eight men and boys were arrested and put under bond here, charged with tarring and feathering Miss Mary Chamberlain, a young school teacher.

The men arrested are Edward R. Cord, E. G. Clark, A. M. Simms, John Schmidt, Watson Scramton, Jay Fitzwater, Chester Anderson and Delbert Kindesparger.

The attack is said to have been precipitated because Miss Chamberlain "had talked about" other women of the community.

It is alleged that one of the prisoners took Miss Chamberlain for a ride, and stopped at a lonely spot on the road, where confederates were waiting. The latter, it is charged, took Miss Chamberlain from the carriage, removed part of her clothing, applied the tar and feathers and left her, after which her escort drove her back to her home.

Robbed of Jewelry on Train.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 9.—Lake Shore railroad detectives report that Mrs. A. A. McCormick, of Chicago, was robbed of a handbag containing $2270 worth of jewels on a train somewhere between Toledo and Cleveland.

The kind of green goods, shell game, blue sky real estate propositions that folks are getting caught on most every day leads to the very true observation that a person should have graduated from diapers and a nursing bottle before undertaking an investment of thousands of dollars in new country, the only knowledge of which has been obtained through the alluring descriptions of real estate agents. This kind of sucker seems to be thicker than butter and is born and caught every day.

HENRY CLAY BEATTIE, JR.

Young Virginian Found Guilty of Wife Murder.

CITY OFFICIALS HELD FOR TAKING BRIBES

Mayor of Gary, Ind., and Others Accused.

Gary, Ind., Sept. 9.—Thomas E. Knotts, mayor of Gary, was arrested on the charge of soliciting and accepting a bribe of $5000 for signing the Dean heating franchise.

The mayor was arrested by deputy sheriffs near the city hall. They entered his office shortly after 7 P. M. when he was alone. The mayor, who signed the affidavit, came from the executive office with the franchise.

Before entering the office Dean was searched by four persons to prove that he was taking money into the room. When he came from it he was again searched. He told the deputies to serve the warrant and they would find the money in an envelope in a pigeon hole in the mayor's desk. The deputies then went into the room, arrested the mayor, who was released after he had given $5000 bond.

Immediately after the mayor's arrest the officers obtained an automobile and started for other city officials. They met Councilman Walter Gibson and served him with a warrant charging him with soliciting a $500 bribe.

Following the arrest of the mayor, Sheriff Thomas Grant arrested the following on the charge of soliciting a bribe: City Engineer C. A. Williston, Alderman Anthony Baukus, Dominick Szymanski, John Simiasko, E. L. Bowser and Police, the son of Alderman Szymanski. Together with Alderman Gussion, they were taken to Crown Point by the sheriff and his deputies.

FIRE ON U. S. S. HANCOCK

Enlisted Men Carry Ammunition From Vessel at Brooklyn Navy Yard.

New York, Sept. 9.—Fire started on the United States ship Hancock at the Brooklyn navy yard and burned fiercely.

The fire had been smoldering in the coal bunkers of the Hancock for five days. Three hundred men immediately were put to work carrying off the hundreds of pounds of ammunition stored in the ammunition room, which was not more than fifty feet from the flames. The men worked in deadly peril because of the proximity of the explosives. Within a short time the vessel was blazing amidships, and the after compartment was cut off.

Three hundred tons of coal were stored in the bunkers of the ship. Captain John R. McDonald, the commander, took charge of the fire fighting and ordered a steady stream of water turned on the coal. The heat was so intense that the steel plates of the hull started and the supporting beams were buckled.

Nice, France, Sept. 9.—The Theater Eldorado collapsed here. Forty-four workmen engaged in making repairs to the building were buried in the ruins when the entire roof fell in. The bodies of sixteen dead workmen have been taken from the debris.

Kills Himself in Jail.

Media, Pa., Sept. 9.—Ephraim Hansley, seventy-eight years old, colored, hanged himself in the Media jail by fastening a towel to the iron window bars. He was awaiting trial for a support of his wife, who lives in Chester.

Man and Girl Drowned in Lake.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 9.—George F. Baxter, assistant secretary of the Syracuse Underwriters' association, and a girl companion were drowned while boating on Onondaga lake.

In certain districts of England the guinea pig is being put to a very practical use as an exterminator of weeds on private lawns and golf grounds. The area to be cleared is surrounded with low wire fencing and the little fellows turned in. They attack the dandelion, plantain and daisy in the order named, and, while they keep the grass nibbled close, they do not kill it. Here would seem to be a cheap substitute for a lawn mower and elbow grease.

COL. ASTOR TO WED TODAY

Itinerant Minister Will Perform
the Ceremony.

TAKES PLACE AT NEWPORT

Millionaire and Miss Force to Be United by Rev. Edwin S. Straight, of Providence, R. I.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 9.—Rev. Edwin S. Straight, of this city, says he is to marry John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeline T. Force and that the wedding will take place at Newport today, according to the arrangements that have been made with the clergyman.

Mr. Straight has for years worked as a carpenter and builder, occasionally supplying a pulpit for some clergyman. Many years ago he was pastor of a Free Baptist church in Warren, R. I.

It took days of effort, during which most of the clergymen of Rhode Island and who still marry divorced persons have been canvassed. Richard B. Comstock, of the law firm of Comstock & Canning, has been indecisive, and it was he who finally concluded the arrangements with Rev. Straight.

In the course of his search for a clergyman to marry his client Mr. Comstock found Rev. Straight and last Tuesday evening had a conference with him at the clergyman's home.

On the following day the clergyman called upon Mr. Comstock, but difficulties had evidently arisen, for upon returning home Mr. Straight declared that he was afraid that he would not be able to perform the ceremony.

Just what the hitch was is not known, but it must have been straightened out. Mr. Comstock again visited the clergyman and everything was fixed up.

During the past few days Mr. Comstock has been a frequent visitor at the Providence city hall, and each time his attention was centered in the marriage bureau. He was seen scurrying about the corridors of the building, and it was later learned that he had spent some time with Dr. E. P. King, the assistant superintendent of health, discussing section 22 of the marriage laws of Rhode Island.

This section is the one which provides that in case of a marriage being performed by a person professing to have a license to join persons in marriage, the said marriage shall not be declared void because of lack of jurisdiction on the part of the person performing the ceremony.

It also provides that such a marriage shall be perfectly valid, providing that it is lawful in other respects and has been performed with a full belief on the part of the persons so married, or either of them, that they have been lawfully joined in marriage.

This section of the law, it is said, bears directly upon the conditions under which Mr. Straight would have to perform the Astor ceremony.

PESTILENCE IN CHINA

Many Sufferers in Flood Districts Dying of Disease.

Pekin, Sept. 9.—Only meager reports have reached the capital from the walled towns in the region of the Yang-Tse valley, where the floods have hemmed in the missionaries and other foreigners.

The report received by the American mission at Wuhu, estimating that 100,000 persons have been drowned, has not yet been verified, but every account confirms the great extent of the disaster.

Travellers arriving by steamboat at Hankow from the upper reaches of the river report that many coffins, of a huge Chinese type, were encountered floating in the Yang-Tse, which indicates that the waters are robbing the graves of former years to augment the number of dead bodies.

From Chang-Teh, in the province of Hunan, comes word that the receding water is being followed by pestilence. That district hardly contains a survivor who has not been affected by the scourge, and many are dying.

Two Killed in Fight Over Cards.

Perth Amboy, N. J., Sept. 9.—A fusillade of shots followed a bitter quarrel of laborers, and two Italian fell dead and another was severely wounded. The affair took place in a boarding house. The shooting came as a climax to a card game in which four men were taking part. After the shooting August Parry was found dead sprawled across the card table, with a bullet in his heart, Gus Dinnall lay dead on the floor, while Frank Dinnall, his brother, was shot through the jaw. Marino Rorino has disappeared and the police are looking for him.

Strike Order Awaits Wire.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Reports that the 35,000 Illinois Central shopmen may be ordered to strike because of the refusal of the railroad to recognize the federated union, were revived. It was rumored that written notices ordering a walkout had been sent to various local bodies several days ago, to be held in abeyance until released by telegrams.

Prohibition Paper Quits.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—The National Prohibitionist, a weekly publication, has suspended publication.

HANG UP ME OLE STRAW HAT.

Marlar, here's me ole straw hat.
Please hang it up, me dear,
On that same nail where it bez hung
Nigh on to twenty year.

It's gittin' frosty, an' me hair
Hain't very thick on top,
An' that air hat's got nary crown,
An' the rim goes kerflop.

Them sparrows built a nest in it
An' wasps an' them hen lice,
An' that air crown was all chewed up
By them air pesky mice.

Now twenty year is middlin' long
To wear around one hat.
The wimmin folks change hats each month.
You're well aware o' that.

I've carried eggs up from the barn
In that air handy hat,
An' though she's got some egg smear on,
I do not keer fur that.

I've brought up berries from the field
In that good ole straw hat,
An' once 'twas full o' kittens
Laid by ole mammy cat.

I've filled 'er up with cabbage leaves
To keep me hot head cool.
An' often dipped a drink with it
Down at the meadow pool.

That ole hat's a'most busted,
But to me she looks good.
I wouldn't swap 'er fur the plug
Of any New York dude.

So hang 'er up on that high nail
An' keep 'er safe, me dear.
When robin comes to nest ag'in
I'll wear that hat next year.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q. I am told that there is enough mineral (ash) in corn and wheat to supply all that a hen needs for her system and eggs. Is this true?
A. Wheat contains but one-eighth per cent mineral, corn one-fifth, while an egg is 5 per cent ash. The mineral matter must thus be supplied by feeding oyster shell, limestone grit or crushed bone, or a hen will run shod on eggs without speaking of her system's demands.

Q. A writer states that skimmilk contains as great a per cent of protein as green cut bone, beef scrap or blood meal. Please state the protein content of the four?
A. Skimmilk, 2.9; g. c. bone, 18; b. scrap, 69.2; b. meal, 32. Your writer likely referred to skimmilk reduced to cottage cheese when it is said to equal sturgeon skin in protein.

Q. Is milk albumen equal to meat products for hens?
A. Milk albumen is too costly for poultry and does not bring the results you get from meat foods.

Q. Where may I buy little turkeys a day old?
A. You will have to order your day-old turkeys from England, as we know of no place in this country where they are hatched and shipped.

Q. When is an egg more susceptible to the entrance of bacteria—when it is wet or dry?
A. When dry the tough membrane that lines the eggshell is impervious to bacteria. If water enters by way of the shell pores and soaks this membrane entrance to the egg contents is easy.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Bird scraps of poor quality affect hen health and the flavor and keeping quality of the egg. Juicy, fresh cut bone costs less than half the price and is far better.

No human can contrive a plan to equal the old turkey hen rearing points. God made her for that, so don't try in the face of Providence and get left on your Christmas dinner.

In the first year's operation of the rat law in Denmark bounties were paid on the bodies of 1,000,000 rats. China's rats are all killed and eaten "free gratis for nothing."

Our English kenzens are struck on blue. They are breeding Blue Andalusians, Blue Orpingtons, Blue Leghorns and Blue Wyandottes. As for us, give us the Red, White and Blue.

If England must import eggs and poultry she surely has rats to burn. On Lord Gifford's estate in a rat campaign with ferrets, traps and poisons 37,000 rats were killed on 2,000 acres.

"Don't put all your eggs into one basket" rather refers to the fellow who puts most of his money into pens and just a little into hens. The chief consideration in building should be for hen health.

There are many "star boarders" in farm and town docks that eat, eat, eat, but stick the "missus" for their board. On the same plan you couldn't make a summer hotel pay if you served hush and prunes every day. To the cook pot with the dromedaries!

A gentleman of Plymouth, Pa., recently received word that he had been left $3,000 by a Texas girl with whom he corresponded when he found her address on an egg. He had never seen the lady and was much surprised to hear of his nice nest egg.

Feathers to the value of $900,000 were exported by Russia last year. In enlightened America we throw $1,000, 000 in feathers on the dump annually and import great quantities from the countries across the seas, where the people don't practice frenzied feather fanning.

Roup is one of the diseases that take a quick hold on turkeys and chickens that are inbred. This disease often takes hold of an inbred flock and cleans up the coops or so afflicts the flock that all chances for winter egg profits are smashed to smithereens.

If Mary wasn't allowed to have her lamb at school the children at a public school near Lebanon, Ill., are allowed to take their chickens. Six children brought their hens one day, and they weren't turned away. Miss Kathryn Enlow, the teacher, is giving a complete course in poultry culture, and we congratulate her on being the fore-runner in what all our public school teachers will do after awhile when Biddy comes into her own.

For destroying weeds of all kinds. The benefit of this condition will continue for several years.

If the rains which have been falling copiously in northern central states for the past two weeks continue until Nov. 1 wild ducks will be quacking on many and erstwhile pond which the owner probably was congratulating himself he would not even have to the drain to get it to produce a bump or crop of flax or corn.

A BOULEVERSEMENT

By SADIE OLCOTT

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

On a train from a great city to Lakeside, an aristocratic aggregation of suburban residences, a couple of ladies dressed in the height of fashion sat together and chatted.

"What do you think, Mrs. Runlon," said one, "of the admission of Mrs. Whitely into our set at Lakeside?"

"I don't see anything the matter with her, Mrs. Dugan."

"Of course there's nothing the matter with her; but, laws a mercy, just think of a woman who is making her own living trying to move among people with fortunes!"

"What does she do? Nothing disreputable, I'm sure."

"She's forewoman at Sturdevant's in the cloak department, I reckon."

"She seems very ladylike. I've been told that she's better educated than any woman in Lakeside."

"What's her education nowadays? I tell you, it's money that does the business."

"I'm sorry to admit that."

"How's Mrs. Whitely going to return the invitations she gets, I'd like to know?"

"I have understood that she hasn't accepted any of them yet. Mrs. Barbour and Mrs. Trask have been trying to get her 'out' because she is so intellectual. They say we need more of that kind in our circle."

"That would be all right, but if you're going to bring in shop people you're not going to keep the circle very select, you can just bet on that."

When the train reached Lakeside each of these ladies entered her automobile and proceeded to her home. Mrs. Dugan picked up an open letter, addressed to her husband, lying on his desk, and read it. The following paragraph brought a pallor to her cheeks.

"It is only lately that I have learned through my wife that you are living in Lakeside. She recognized Mag Barker, whom you married, as one of the leaders of fashion in Lakeside. I have instituted proceedings against you for obtaining money under false pretenses, as that the goods you sold to me in Wyoming were spoiled when you delivered them and received pay for them."

"I have not before this had the means to prosecute you, even if I had known your whereabouts. But I have just made a big sale of land to a railway corporation, on which my commissions are a couple of hundred thousand. This shall all be spent, if necessary, in landing you in jail."

Mrs. Dugan flew upstairs and found her husband in his bedroom in deep dejection.

"Well," she said, "I see that Whitely has found us. I smell danger as soon as I saw his wife."

"Yes," he replied. "And it will take all we've got to settle and keep out of jail."

"Can't you make a bluff?"

"No."

"Well, brace up. We must go to the lawyers' tonight. It won't do to give up our position in society till we have a chance."

"All right, Mag. I haven't seen Whitely yet. I don't know what I can do with him. I may save some thing. He'll probably be here tomorrow."

The couple "braced up" and went to the Turner reception. They received a shock there. Who should enter but Mrs. Whitely on the arm of her husband.

"Hello, Pat," said Whitely. "Hello, Mag. When did you drift east?"

"I'll see you in the morning, Mr. Whitely," said Dugan obsequiously. "Where shall I find you?"

"I have no place for talk. Suppose I come to your house?"

"Say 10 o'clock in the morning."

"Ten o'clock it shall be. You're looking well, Mrs. Dugan. I saw you yesterday in the train. I was sitting in the seat behind you."

Mrs. Dugan turned as red as a boiled lobster.

Neither Mrs. Whitely nor her husband interfered during the evening with the social standing of the Dugans, but the latter left early. The next morning Whitely called at Dugan's residence and was admitted by a butler in livery. Introduced into Dugan's library—the books had been selected for him by another—the two sat down for a conference. Dugan offered $50,000 in settlement. Whitely said his loss had been $100,000 and he must have every cent.

"I can't raise the cash for a long time to come," replied Dugan, but I'll tell you what I'll do. This house and lot cost me $40,000. I give you $60,000 in cash and throw in the property."

Whitely accepted the proposition and the matter was closed.

The very next day the Dugans left their residence and the Whitelys took possession. Mrs. Whitely gave up her position. Pat Dugan was obliged to go to work bossing a gang of laborers, and his wife took in sewing. But Pat never recovered the grip he had lost, and his wife was thenceforth unknown in society.

When it was announced that Mrs. Dugan had left Lakeside and the Whitelys were in possession of her home, the village was agog. Every one knew that Mrs. Dugan had opposed Mrs. Whitely's entrance into society, which increased the interest in the change. But the reason for it never became known. Mr. and Mrs. Whitely kept the secret.

It is not an uncommon thing for the butter producing capacity of the off spring of a herd of common cows to be increased by from fifty to a hundred pounds per year over that of their dams as a result of the use of a prepotent purebred dairy sire. In many cases this would be the difference between shining along on bare bones and profitable dairyming, between the star boarder and the money maker.

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair to Its Natural Color.

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the vision of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

This remedy is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Her Compliment.

A popular English comedian and music hall singer, asked what his funniest experience was, said: "One time I drove up to the theater in Dublin and was humming a tune when I got out. An old Irishwoman who had failed to get in the theater heard me and said, 'Begorra, if that is how he sings I am glad I didn't go in.'"—London Mail.

Laws which have been passed in a number of states enable farm owners to have their farm name copyrighted by the payment of a dollar fee. Too many go on the principle that it is better not to name the farm until certain improvements and cleaning up have been done. The writer holds it a better plan to put the name of the farm on a neat signboard at the front of the premises. Then if the condition of the premises is not on a par with the dignity of the name chosen there is a constant incentive to make it so.

RYE A GOOD LATE PASTURE FOR HOGS.

In order to prolong the grazing season as late in the fall as possible it is greatly to our advantage to sow a patch of rye, writes H. E. McCartney in the National Stockman. If sown early in a soil that has been handled so as to conserve the moisture it will make considerable feed before the

A North Dakota farmer in expressing his reasons for preferring the Duroc-Jersey breed of hogs says: "In the first place, they are more prolific than other breeds and always produce splendid litters. They are splendid mothers and take good care of the little ones. With fairly good care and good quarters they very seldom raise less than all the pigs farrowed. With good feed they grow rapidly and attain maturity in as short a time as any other breed. They put on flesh rapidly. hard freezes come. Rye pasture will be green and palatable long after the regular pastures have turned brown and are frozen up for the winter. A few weeks of late pasture will do much to increase the thrift of the stock grazed upon it and to take it through the winter in good condition.

Sows and fall pigs will revel in rye. There is no other feed that can be provided in late fall that will so stimulate milk flow as will good rye forage. Lack of green feed is often the cause of fall pigs being less growthy than those of the spring crop. Rye furnishes just what is needed to keep those pigs healthy and make rapid and economical growth.

The earlier rye is sown, provided weather conditions are right, the more fall feed will be provided. Last year we sowed a patch in August. The ground was quite dry at the time of the seeding, but rains came, and the field made a heavy growth that fall. Sown any time in late August or early September a wonderful green mat will be formed in a comparatively short time if moisture is available. A bushel per acre sown with a press drill is the most satisfactory way of putting it in.

Rye will come out early in the spring and be the first of all crops ready for pasturing. Thus it will furnish a big relief from the months of dry feed of winter. Especially will it be a boon to the brood sows and their promising litters.

A Rule For Feeding Cows.

The standard method is to feed as many pounds of grain per day to each cow as she produces pounds of butter fat per week, or one-fourth to one-third as much grain as she gives pounds of milk daily. No two cows can be fed exactly alike. Each must receive individual attention according to her requirements.

A general grain mixture may be used, however, which will meet the needs of most of the cows in the herd. The amount of this mixture to be given may then be varied according to the production of the cow.

High producers need more protein than cows producing only small amounts of milk and butter fat. The amount of feed used by cows depends also upon their body weight, larger cows requiring more feed for maintenance.

Sheep as Weed Destroyers.

Every farm should keep a few sheep—say twenty—on a quarter section. They are not only profitable from a wool and mutton standpoint, but as destroyers of weeds alone are well worth their keep. Turned into the wheat and oats stubble during the fall, they will eat many weeds and weed seeds. They will also thrash out and tramp into the ground many weed seeds, causing them to germinate sufficiently to be killed by the frosts. Much foxtail and other weeds often come to maturity after harvest in the stubble fields, and this can be prevented by pasturing of sheep or other stock. The successful fighting of weeds does not mean hoeing and plowing from early morn until late evening.

Government Hog Tonic.

The United States department of agriculture recommends the following mixture as an excellent hog tonic: "Wood charcoal, one pound; sulphur sodium bicarbonate, two pounds; sodium hyposulphate, two pounds; sodium sulphate, one pound; antimony sulphide, one pound." These substances are thoroughly powdered and mixed. A dose is a large tablespoonful for each 200 pounds of hog flesh. It is most conveniently given in a thin slop.

Quality In Milk.

With dairying, as with other lines of farming, the dairyman should familiarize himself as much as possible with every fact which can be brought to bear upon the quality of this product.

Look to the Barnyard.

Many barnyards are refrigerators in winter and cesspools in summer, and yet intelligent farmers expect good dairy results from letting cows stand around in them.

JOLLY FIREMEN

A party of Latrobe firemen caused no little fun at the Western Maryland station Friday evening while waiting for the train. Dave Johnson was there with his mouth organ and guitar and the fire fighters sang and danced while Dave played. The local musician also contributed a song or two and few in the crowds failed to show their appreciation by very generous contributions.

HE LOST HIS BET.

But Not in Accordance With the Rules of the Game.

A certain thrifty suburbanite who contrives to "hold out" a little for sundry personal purposes despite the alertness of his better half is often put to queer shifts to keep his private bank roll from her prying eyes. When he some time ago began a systematic conservation of his resources, with an eye to attractive odds in the baseball betting on the pennant, he bethought himself of an old vest that he had seen hanging in a dark part of the cellar, which he wore when he was making garden in the spring. The vest would make an excellent depository, so he thought.

Deciding one morning recently to come up to the city and "look 'em over," he repaired to the cellar. Horrors! The vest was gone. Search as he might, it was nowhere to be found, and with a fallen heart he resorted to the last desperate expedient and sought his wife.

"Why, yes," she replied, with a frown on her pretty face, "it smelled of mold and paint, so I just had to get rid of it, and I sold it to the ragman."

She watched him sink limply into a chair with a groan that shook the china in the china closet.

"But don't worry, pet; the $50 you so carelessly left in the vest is not lost, but is safely invested in this beautiful hat. Isn't it a beauty, dear?"

And as she produced one of the latest bucket shaped monstrosities as big as a water pail he pulled a long breath and fell into a faint on the dining room floor.—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Lacked Experience.

A story which dates back to the last Bryn Mawr horse show is being told on a very popular young woman. She is an excellent tennis player and can paddle a canoe most gracefully, but the Bryn Mawr show was her first attendance at an exhibition of thoroughbreds.

"Are you a good judge of horse flesh?" inquired one of her friends from New York.

"Oh, my dear, I don't know; I should say not. I never tasted any," she said.—Philadelphia Times.

George Was Honest.

George Butler, canon of Winchester cathedral, in England, was the son of Dr. Butler, head master of Harrow. The boy grew up to be a dignified, serious man, but in his youth he had a keen sense of humor. Dr. Butler wore a fine suit of black, with knee breeches and cloth gaiters, and, with his powdered hair, was a figure calculated to move any schoolboy to admiration and awe. One morning little George watched him as he set out for school and observed that his father wore only one gaiter. When Dr. Butler returned he said to the boy:

"You were here, George, when I went away this morning. Didn't you see that I had only one gaiter?"

"Yes, papa."

"Then why didn't you tell me?"

"Because," answered George coolly, "I thought it would amuse the boys."

No Air Castles For Him.

One of Philadelphia's wealthiest men, who has made a fortune out of building operations, was spending a few weeks in the Poconos, where he made the acquaintance of a romantic young maid who paints china and writes poetry.

"Isn't this simply superb?" she inquired one night of the Philadelphia as they sat on the porch of a
